National	African Union	EU-African Union Joint Communiqué	The European Union and the African Union reaffirm their strong commitment to full implementation of the Paris agreement, and call on all partners to keep up the momentum created in 2015.(...) The European Union and the African Union reaffirm their commitment to continuing to address the adverse effects of climate change on human and animal health, natural ecosystems and other social and economic impacts that threaten our developmental gains as a global community.	https://www.au.int/web/en/pressreleases/2017/0602/eu-african-union-joint-communic%C3%A9-implementation-paris-agreement	1 June 2017
National	Argentina	Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Worship	The Argentine Government deeply regrets the United States' decision to withdraw from the Paris Agreement. (...) Argentina maintains its firm commitment to the Paris Agreement and will continue participating actively with the other States Parties in the preparatory process for the COP 23 to the Convention, with a view to achieving concrete progress in the application of the Paris Agreement. Climate change is an extremely serious and far-reaching problem with an economic and social impact that requires urgent and joint action by civil society and national governments. The Argentine Government therefore reaffirms its will to continue working on the implementation of the nationally determined contributions to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and increase Argentina's capacity for adaptation to climate change, within the UNFCCC.	https://www.mrecic.gov.ar/en/united-states-withdrawal-paris-agreement	1 June 2017
National	Australia	Minister for Foreign Affairs, Julie Bishop, Minister for Environment and Energy, Josh Frydenberg	The Turnbull Government today reaffirms Australia's strong commitment to the Paris Agreement on climate change and the Doha Amendment to the Kyoto Protocol. [...] The Turnbull Government is working to further reduce emissions through the Emissions Reduction Fund, the National Energy Productivity Plan, the phase down of hydrofluorocarbons and the Renewable Energy Target. To maintain our competitiveness our energy policies are technology neutral, ensuring we keep the right mix of energy for an affordable and reliable energy system as we transition to a lower emissions future.	http://foreignminister.gov.au/releases/Pages/2017/17_mr_170602a.aspx	2 June 2017
National	Bangladesh	Ministry of Foreign Affairs	Bangladesh is disappointed at the United States' decision of withdrawing from the Paris Climate Agreement. It would be unfortunate to lose a leading partner like the United States in the global journey to secure a green and safe planet for ourselves and our future generations. Bangladesh, being one of the most climate vulnerable countries with a current population of 160 million, remains committed to the Paris Climate Agreement. Bangladesh would continue its efforts with all friends and partners around the globe to mobilize domestic and international resources to address the grave threats posed by climate change.	http://www.mofa.gov.bd/media/bangladesh-disappointed-united-states-decision-withdrawing-paris-climate-agreement	6 June 2017
National	Brazil	Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Ministry of Environment	Brazil remains committed to the global effort against climate change and to the implementation of the Paris Agreement. The fight against climate change is an irreversible process that cannot be postponed and is compatible with economic growth. It provides opportunities to promote sustainable development and foster sectors of cutting-edge technology. The Brazilian Government will continue to work with all countries that are Parties to the Agreement and other stakeholders in the promotion of sustainable development, with low emissions of greenhouse gases and resilient to the adverse effects of climate change.	http://www.itamaraty.gov.br/en/press-releases/16394-joint-press-release-from-the-ministry-of-foreign-affairs-and-the-ministry-of-environment-climate-change	1 June 2017
National	Canada	Prime Minister Justin Trudeau	We are deeply disappointed that the United States federal government has decided to withdraw from the Paris Agreement. Canada is unwavering in our commitment to fight climate change and support clean economic growth. Canadians know we need to take decisive and collective action to tackle the many harsh realities of our changing climate. [...] We are all custodians of this world, and that is why Canada will continue to work with the U.S. at the state level, and with other U.S. stakeholders, to address climate change and promote clean growth. We will also continue to reach out to the U.S. federal government to discuss this matter of critical importance for all humankind, and to identify areas of shared interest for collaboration, including on emissions reductions.	http://pm.gc.ca/eng/news/2017/06/01/statement-prime-minister-canada-response-united-states-decision-withdraw-paris	1 June 2017
National	Chile	Ministry of Foreign Affairs	The Government of Chile expresses its profound disappointment at the United States' decision to withdraw from the Paris Agreement on Climate Change. The Paris Agreement is one of the most important accomplishments achieved by the international community, as a joint framework to address climate change in the 21st century. Its implementation is key to the well-being of present and future generations. [...] Chile has made concrete commitments to reduce emissions and increase the adaptive capacities of its territory. [...] The Government of Chile will continue to work in the consolidation of international partnerships to build a sustainable world through the effective implementation of the Paris Agreement.	http://www.minrel.gob.cl/statement-on-united-states-withdrawal-from-paris-agreement/minrel/2017-06-01/165453.html	1 June 2017
National	Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Panama, Paraguay, Peru	The Independent Association of Latin America and the Caribbean	[...] AILAC, a group of Latin-American countries highly vulnerable to the adverse effects of climate change, state their deep disappointment by the decision made by the government of the United States to withdraw from the Paris Agreement. We express our full, decided and irreversible commitment to climate action and to the multilateral regime established around the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change, the Kyoto Protocol and the Paris Agreement.[...] The Paris Agreement has provided overwhelming signals of the transformation required by our economies. We are now witnessing an irreversible energy revolution that is receiving multimillionaire investments throughout the globe and in this sense, we emphasize the essential role that the private sector, civil society and local governments play in this global effort. We confirm our commitment to the Paris Agreement and call upon all Parties of the UN climate regime and to all stakeholders to continue working towards the success of the Agreement and the achievement of its long-term goals since they are necessary for sustainable development at global scale.	http://ailac.org/en/	2 June 2017
National	China	Premier Li Keqiang	Li Keqiang said combating climate change is a global voice and consensus. China has always actively participated in promoting and the signing of the Paris Agreement, and was also one of the first countries to recognize the Paris Agreement through the legislative process as well as the first ones to submit the file of national plan on dealing with climate change to the United Nations. As a big developing country, it is not only the international responsibility China should shoulder but also the interior demand for China in the transformation of development mode. The Chinese side will continue to fulfill its commitments of taking the green, low carbon and sustainable development road and earnestly moving toward the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development with all the countries.	http://www.fmprc.gov.cn/mfa_eng/topics_665678/LKQFWDGBJXZDZLNDHWCXDSJCZGOMLDRHWDDBLSJXFW/1467839.shtml	6/2/2017
National	China	Foreign Ministry Spokesperson, Hua Chunying	Climate change is a challenge for the whole world and no country can stand aloof. The Paris Agreement is a hard-won result which represents the broadest consensus of the international community and sets the target for the global campaign against climate change. The general trend of green, low-carbon and sustainable development advocated by the Paris Agreement coincides with China's policy of promoting ecological advancement. However the other countries may change, China will continue to pursue innovative, coordinated, green, open and shared development, bear in mind its domestic requirements for sustainable growth, step up concrete efforts to deal with climate change and faithfully implement the Paris Agreement. China will stay committed to upholding and promoting the global governance on climate change, and take an active part in the multilateral process on climate change. We will work with all relevant parties to safeguard the outcomes of the Paris Agreement, press ahead with the negotiation and implementation of the enforcement rules, and promote green, low-carbon and sustainable growth of the world.	http://www.fmprc.gov.cn/mfa_eng/xwfw_665399/s2510_665401/2511_665403/t1467100.shtml	1 June 2017

National	Ethiopia	in its capacity as Chair of Climate Vulnerable Forum	We deeply regret the USA indication of withdrawal from the Paris Agreement announced by President Donald Trump on 1 June 2017. [...] The World should move forward and the Forum wishes to acknowledge the leadership shown by the other members of the G7 and all other parties to the Paris Agreement who remain committed. The V20 Dialogue with representatives of the G20 at Washington, DC on 23 April this year demonstrated a very significant level of convergence between major economies and vulnerable developing countries alike to move forward with Paris Agreement implementation through ambitious climate action wherein 1.5 degrees Celsius is now an important international objective. [...] We will do all that it takes to protect ourselves, acting through peaceful and cooperative means and reiterate our full commitment to working with all nations in taking forward the Paris Agreement. We urge all countries to work with us and are convinced of the otherwise universal solidarity for ambitious climate action and for the urgent and effective implementation of the Paris Agreement. National	EU	EU Climate Action and Energy Commissioner, Miguel Arias Cañete	The Paris Agreement will endure. The world can continue to count on Europe for global leadership in the fight against climate change. Europe will lead through ambitious climate policies and through continued support to the poor and vulnerable. The EU will strengthen its existing partnerships and seek new alliances from the world's largest economies to the most vulnerable island states. This partnership will of course include the many US businesses, citizens and communities that have voiced their support for Paris and are taking ambitious climate action. Together, we will stand by Paris, we will implement Paris.	https://ec.europa.eu/clima/news/statement-eu-climate-action-and-energy-commissioner-miguel-arias-ca%C3%B1ete-us-announcement_en	6 June 2017

National	European Parliament	European Parliament President, Tajani	The parties of the COP21 should honour their international commitments. It is a matter of trust and leadership. Withdrawing from the Paris agreement is a mistake for the US, for the planet, innovation and job creation. A debate in the European Parliament is necessary to express our strong political willingness to continue to lead the fight against climate change and boost our competitiveness. The Paris Agreement is an opportunity for citizens, for our environment and for our economy.	http://www.europarl.europa.eu/the-president/en/newsroom/european-parliament-to-hold-debate-following-us-decision-to-withdraw-from-paris-agreement?webaction=view.acceptCookies	1 June 2017
National	Fiji	Fijian Prime Minister and Incoming President of COP23, Frank Bainimarama	As incoming COP President, I reaffirm that I will do everything possible to continue to forge a grand coalition that will accelerate the momentum that has continued since the Paris Agreement, embracing governments, civil society, the private sector and millions of ordinary men and women around the world. I am also convinced that the United States Government will eventually rejoin our struggle because the scientific evidence of man-made climate change is well understood. The issue is settled, and the impacts are obvious, and humankind ignores these facts at its peril.	https://cop23.com.fj/statement-fijian-prime-minister-incoming-president-cop23/?platform=hootsuite	1 June 2017
National	France	President of the French Republic, Emmanuel Macron	[Informal translation] The vocation of France is to lead these battles which involve the whole of humanity. That is why France has placed itself at the forefront of the fight against climate change. It is firmly committed to all international negotiations. In December 2015, France succeeded in winning over 195 countries to sign a joint commitment, the Paris Climate Accord. So, yes, I tell you this evening with great force: We will not renegotiate a less ambitious agreement. Never. France this evening calls on all the signatory countries to remain within the framework of the Paris Agreement, to remain up to our responsibilities and not to give up anything. I want tonight to say to the United States: France believes in you. The world believes in you. I know you are a very large nation. That the United States was founded to make freedom, truth, reason triumph everywhere against ignorance and obscurity. But do not be deceived. On the climate, there is no plan B. Because there is no planet B.	http://www.elysee.fr/declarations/article/declaration-suite-au-retrait-des-etats-unis-de-l-accord-de-paris/	2 June 2017
National	France, Germany, Italy	Joint statement from Paolo Gentiloni, Emmanuel Macron and Angela Merkel	We deem the momentum generated in Paris in December 2015 irreversible and we firmly believe that the Paris Agreement cannot be renegotiated, since it is a vital instrument for our planet, societies and economies. We are convinced that the implementation of the Paris Agreement offers substantial economic opportunities for prosperity and growth in our countries and on a global scale. We therefore reaffirm our strongest commitment to swiftly implement the Paris Agreement, including its climate finance goals and we encourage all our partners to speed up their action to combat climate change.	http://www.governo.it/articolo/dichiarazione-italia-germania-francia-sullannuncio-degli-usa-delluscita-dallaccordo-di	1 June 2017
National	Germany	Joint press statement of German Ministers	Our sound climate policy and our intensive international cooperation with other countries to protect the climate have already forged a strong alliance against the isolationist approach of the new US Administration to climate issues. Major nations such as China, Brazil, India and Russia stand shoulder to shoulder with us, as do the many countries which are particularly hard hit by climate change, such as the African states and the small island states. And let's not forget that even in America there are a crop of federal states, local administrations and companies who have assumed a pioneering role in climate policy. We all support the Paris Agreement. We will keep the door open to the United States should it wish to accede to the Agreement again at a later date. Let us not be swayed by the short-sightedness of a single party. The international community must stick together. Climate policy is a policy for peace.	http://www.auswaertiges-amt.de/nn_729116/EN/Infoservice/Presse/Meldungen/2017/170601_Erk%C3%A4rung_US_A_Pariser_Abkommen.html?nnm=729004	1 June 2017

National	Japan	Ministry of Foreign Affairs	1. Climate change requires a concerted effort by the whole of the international community. Japan believes the leadership of the developed countries to be of great importance, and the steady implementation of the Paris Agreement is critical in this regard. 2. As Japan was hoping to work with the United States within the framework of the Paris Agreement, the recent announcement by the US administration on its withdrawal from the Paris Agreement is regrettable. 3. The United States remains as the second largest emitter of the greenhouse gases and yet has advanced technology stimulated by innovation as well as policy measures in the area of the environment. Japan hopes to explore ways in which it can cooperate with the United States so as to effectively address the climate change issues. Japan will work with other Parties to the Paris Agreement for its steady and full implementation. Through such efforts, Japan will vigorously tackle this important issue of climate change.	http://www.mofa.go.jp/press/release/press4e_001610.html	2 June 2017
National	Japan	Japanese Ministers	"America's announcement that it is pulling out of the Paris climate change agreement is regrettable. We thought we could cooperate on climate change with the U.S. based on the agreement. Responding to the problem of climate change is a global issue, we'll continue to work with the U.S. on the problem," Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga. Japan will "work with other parties to the Paris agreement for its steady and full implementation." Foreign Minister Fumio Kishida. "It's extremely disappointing. But the withdrawal has only just been announced. If possible, I'd like to persuade the U.S. (to reconsider)." National	Maldives	President of Maldives	[...] As one of the countries most vulnerable to the impacts of climate change, and a leader of 37 island and low-lying coastal nations at the United Nations, we are especially disappointed that the world's largest economy and biggest historic emitter abdicated its responsibility on such a critical issue. Still, immediately after the US announcement was made, much of the world reaffirmed its commitment to the Paris Agreement and our common dignity as global citizens. [...] The Maldives will continue its historic role as the voice of the nations most vulnerable to climate change and work with all partners, new and old, to realise the promise of a clean energy economy and healthy planet.	http://www.presidencymaldives.gov.mv/Index.aspx?lid=11&amp;dcid=17938	2 June 2017
National	Mexico	Ministry of Foreign Affairs	Mexico reiterates its emphatic support for the Paris Agreement and will continue to implement both the goals of its Intended Nationally Determined Contribution (INDC) and its National Climate Change Strategy. (...) It is essential to keep the entire international community united in the face of this problem. Mexico distinguished itself as one of the main leaders of the Paris Agreement negotiations. We will continue to wholeheartedly promote international cooperation so that the agreement can be fully implemented. Remaining committed to the agreement is not only what society demands of us but it is also the key for moving towards a more sustainable, competitive and resilient economy. Taking action to curb climate change is a moral imperative that we owe to future generations. It is a social necessity, because it responds to the immediate interests of our societies, is economically viable and encourages new technologies that boost the development and well-being of our countries.	http://www.gob.mx/sre/prensa/110142	1 June 2017

National	Palau	President Tommy Remengesau	[...] The ramifications of President Donald Trump's decision are far-reaching. [...] Now, it is up to the rest of us to step forward and take the helm. As part of the Climate Vulnerable Forum, Palau has committed to transition to 100 percent clean energy. [...] We know that, despite what President Trump says and does, we have no time to waste. We also know that the vast majority of the American people believe in the Paris Agreement, and will keep doing everything they can to move toward a clean energy future. [...] In the end though, I choose not to view President Trump's decision as a setback. Instead, it is yet another clarion call to those who join me in my commitment to work harder, and stand united in our continued efforts to do better for our shared future.	http://earthjustice.org/blog/2017-june/president-of-palau-if-u-s-won-t-lead-we-all-will	2 June 2017
National	Philippines	Climate Change Commission	The Philippines is deeply troubled by the decision of the U.S. to withdraw from the Paris Agreement and appeals that they reconsider their position. [...] The Philippines, as one of the most vulnerable countries to the adverse effects of climate change, affirms its commitment to the Paris Agreement. We recognize the need for all countries to work together to address the increases in global temperature, which have resulted and will continue to result in more intense and frequent typhoons and droughts for the Philippines, threatening the security of our people, the food and water needed to sustain them, and their livelihoods. We call on all other countries that are parties to the Paris Agreement to become even more vigilant in ensuring that the Paris Agreement achieves its goal, as the future of our children and this world depends on it.	http://climate.gov.ph/15-press-release/222-ccc-statement-on-the-u-s-withdrawal-from-the-paris-agreement	2 June 2017

The Paris agreement is a historic response to current environmental challenges in an effort to achieve a low-carbon and sustainable future resilient to climate change. This agreement is of vital importance for our planet, people and economies. New negotiations on a climate agreement could prevent the effective global confrontation of dynamic climate changes, which could have negative consequences.	http://www.mzz.gov.si/en/newsroom/news/article/6/38558/	2 June 2017
National	South Africa	Department of Environmental Affairs	(...) South Africa therefore expresses its profound regret over the decision of the United States of America to withdraw from the Paris Agreement, which reflects the multilateral agreement to keep global temperature increase to well below 2 degrees celsius. (...) South Africa has full confidence in and reiterates its unwavering commitment to the realization of the goals set out in the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change and its Paris Agreement. The global effort to curb climate change and address its impacts cannot be postponed. There is an urgent need for action, and as such there is no space for renegotiation. South Africa has full confidence that the momentum of the collective effort to address climate change will only accelerate. We recognize the outstanding contribution made to the fight against climate change in the US by past Administrations, states, cities, scientific organizations, civil society, business and individual citizens. South Africa therefore calls on the United States to reconsider its position and to re-commit to the multilateral process.	https://www.environment.gov.za/mediarelease/unitedstateswithdrawsfromparisagreement	2 June 2017

National	Sweden	Deputy Prime Minister of Sweden, Isabella Lövin	Sweden remains committed to the Paris Agreement, to becoming one of the world's first fossil-free welfare nations, and to continue supporting actions in developing countries. We will continue to push the climate agenda forward. It is now even more important for progressive countries and regions to join together and show leadership – not least US actors, companies and states. The global level of ambition must be raised.	http://www.government.se/statements/2017/06/statement-regarding-united-states-decision-to-withdraw-from-the-paris-climate-agreement/	1 June 2017
National	United Kingdom	Prime Minister Theresa May	The Prime Minister expressed her disappointment with the decision and stressed that the UK remained committed to the Paris Agreement, as she set out recently at the G7. She said that the Paris Agreement provides the right global framework for protecting the prosperity and security of future generations, while keeping energy affordable and secure for our citizens and businesses. The President made clear that the door remains open to future US involvement in the Agreement. The Prime Minister and President agreed on the importance of continued cooperation on wider energy issues.	https://www.gov.uk/government/news/pm-call-with-us-president-1-june-2017	1 June 2017
Sub-national	C40 (network of the world's megacities committed to addressing climate change)	Chair, Anne Hidalgo	As the C40 Chair, a network of ninety-one of the world's major cities committed to tackling climate change, and as the Mayor of Paris, I urge the US Administration to reconsider their decision. The next four years will be crucial in determining if the worst effects of climate change can be avoided. American leadership on this urgent challenge is needed now more than ever. Regardless of Donald Trump's definitive decision, the great cities of the world, in particular the twelve American C40 cities, remain resolutely committed to doing what needs to be done to implement the Paris Agreement.	http://www.c40.org/blog_posts/statement-from-anne-hidalgo-mayor-of-paris-and-c40-chair	1 June 2017
Sub-national	State of Alaska	Governor Bill Walker	Alaska is the United States' only Arctic state. In spite of the United States' withdrawal from the Paris climate accord today, Alaska will continue to work to boost national defense and security measures for our 6,640 miles of Alaskan coastline, increase resilience for Arctic communities, and provide energy leadership for the nation. [...] Alaskans know that our landscape is changing at an accelerating pace. We are experiencing social and economic upheaval caused by shrinking sea ice, rising sea level, increasing intensity of storms, and increasing coastal erosion. Alaska communities such as Shishmaref, Kivalina, and Newtok are literally washing into the ocean.	https://gov.alaska.gov/newsroom/2017/06/governor-walker-issues-statement-regarding-withdrawal-from-paris-agreement/	1 June 2017
Sub-national	State of California	Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr.	Donald Trump has absolutely chosen the wrong course. He's wrong on the facts. America's economy is boosted by following the Paris Agreement. He's wrong on the science. Totally wrong. California will resist this misguided and insane course of action. Trump is AWOL but California is on the field, ready for battle.	https://www.gov.ca.gov/news.php?id=19817	1 June 2017
Sub-national	State of Delaware	Governor John Carney	I am deeply disappointed that President Trump has chosen to withdraw the United States from the Paris Agreement that united nations across the globe in a fight against climate change. Already the effects of climate change are taking a toll on Delawareans, as sea levels rise and extreme weather events increase driven by warming of the planet from carbon dioxide. [...] The world is now on notice that without the United States' leadership in reducing greenhouse gases that fuel rapid climate change, it's an even greater uphill battle for future generations facing this ever-encroaching threat.	http://news.delaware.gov/2017/06/01/governor-carneys-statement-on-president-trumps-decision-to-withdraw-u-s-from-the-paris-agreement/	1 June 2017
Sub-national	State of Colorado	Governor John Hickenlooper	It is a serious mistake to back out of the Paris Accord. This is a historic global agreement between almost every nation on earth to address the single most pressing issue facing humanity. Abandoning this climate deal is like ripping off your parachute when you should be pulling the ripcord.	https://www.colorado.gov/governor/news/governor-hickenlooper%E2%80%99s-statement-president-trump%E2%80%99s-decision-withdraw-paris-accord	1 June 2017
Sub-national	State of Vermont	Governor Phil Scott	The President's decision to withdraw from the Paris Climate Agreement is disappointing and concerning, particularly given the widespread and non-partisan support from business and political leaders for remaining in the Agreement. Vermont has taken a leadership role in addressing climate change, and the President's decision today only strengthens our commitment. We have strong, regional multi-state partnerships through the Coalition of Northeast Governors (CONEG) and have made much progress in reducing the region's carbon emissions, and we will maintain this work because it is the right and responsible thing to do.	http://governor.vermont.gov/press-release/statement-governor-phil-scott-president%E2%80%99s-decision-withdraw-paris-climate-agreement	1 June 2017
Sub-national	State of Montana	Governor Steve Bullock	Ask any Montana farmer, rancher, hunter, angler, or skier – climate change is real and poses a threat to our economy and our way of life. To not acknowledge that or deal with it in a responsible way is short-sighted and dangerous. In Montana, and in America, we face our challenges head on and work together to find solutions. We do not run away from them or pretend they don't exist.	http://news.mt.gov/governor-bullock-weighs-in-on-decision-to-withdraw-from-the-paris-agreement	1 June 2017
Sub-national	The United States Climate Alliance	New York Governor Andrew M. Cuomo, California Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr., and Washington State Governor Jay R. Inslee	New York Governor Andrew M. Cuomo, California Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr., and Washington State Governor Jay R. Inslee formed the United States Climate Alliance, a coalition that will convene U.S. states committed to upholding the Paris Climate Agreement and taking aggressive action on climate change. These three states, representing over one-fifth of U.S. GDP, are committed to achieving the U.S. goal of reducing emissions 26-28 percent from 2005 levels and meeting or exceeding the targets of the federal Clean Power Plan and continue to work closely together with other states to help fill the void left by the federal government.  Vermont, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Oregon, and Hawaii have also joined.	http://www.governor.ny.gov/news/new-york-governor-cuomo-california-governor-brown-and-washington-governor-inslee-announce	1 June 2017
International	ICLEI International	Secretary General, Gino Van Begin	President Trump's decision to withdraw from the Paris Agreement is out of step with reality and the current drive towards a global low-carbon transition. Making abundant use of 'alternative facts', he has painted the US and its citizens as victims of this groundbreaking accord. On the contrary, the Paris Agreement and its fulfillment are the best chance for the US and the world to create green jobs and save millions of lives and billions of dollars, avoiding the worst case scenarios of climate inaction. Climate action is not going to stop. Local governments, in the U.S. and globally, will keep moving forward on clean energy, sustainable transport and resilience, as most countries have again pledged to do, from the most vulnerable to major emitters. A heavy burden falls now on the shoulders of local governments in the U.S. and all climate stakeholders worldwide, as the Trump administration fails to recognize the stark reality of climate change and the urgency of acting on it. It's now imperative for all levels of government and non-state actors to build even stronger and wider coalitions for rapid implementation, to keep the world on the right track	http://www.iclei.org/details/article/us-withdraws-from-the-paris-agreement-reaction-statement-by-iclei-secretary-general.html	1 June 2017
International	OECD	Secretary-General, Angel Gurría	Despite the US decision to withdraw from this agreement, it is reassuring that all of the remaining signatories have unequivocally reaffirmed their own commitments, demonstrating strong leadership toward the goal of net zero greenhouse gas emissions by the second half of the century. I urge countries, companies, cities, states, and citizens to step up their efforts in combatting climate change. I also hope that the US government might find it possible to reconsider its decision at a future moment	http://www.oecd.org/newsroom/statement-oecd-secretary-general-angel-guria-on-us-decision-to-withdraw-from-the-paris-agreement-on-climate-change.htm	2 June 2017
International	UNEP	Chief, Erik Solheim	The US decision to leave Paris in no way brings an end to this unstoppable effort. China, India, the European Union and others are already showing strong leadership. UN Environment urges all parties to redouble their efforts. International	UNFCCC Secretariat	Organisation	The Secretariat of the UNFCCC regrets the announcement by the President of the United States that his government will withdraw from the Paris Climate Change Agreement. The Secretariat also notes the announced intention to renegotiate the modalities for the US participation in the agreement. In this regard, it stands ready to engage in dialogue with the United States government regarding the implications of this announcement. The Paris Agreement remains a historic treaty signed by 195 Parties and ratified by 146 countries plus the European Union. Therefore it cannot be renegotiated based on the request of a single Party.	http://newsroom.unfccc.int/unfccc-newsroom/unfccc-statement-on-the-us-decision-to-withdraw-from-paris-agreement/	1 June 2017
International	United Nations	Spokesman for the United Nations Secretary-General, Stéphane Dujarric	The decision by the United States to withdraw from the Paris Agreement on climate change is a major disappointment for global efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and promote global security. Secretary-General António Guterres remains confident that cities, States and businesses within the US – along with other countries – will continue to demonstrate vision and leadership by working for the low-carbon, resilient economic growth that will create quality jobs and markets for 21st century prosperity.	http://www.un.org/apps/news/story.asp?NewsID=56882#.WYcheuGOM8	1 June 2017
International	World Bank	Organisation	The World Bank Group reaffirms its longstanding commitment to tackle the climate challenge and to work with developing countries to meet their climate goals. We are working intensively in areas like clean energy, climate-smart agriculture, sustainable urbanization, and disaster risk management, and are on our way to meeting our own goal of having 28 percent of our portfolio be climate-related by 2020. We will continue to work with governments, partners and the private sector towards a more sustainable, stable world.	http://www.worldbank.org/en/news/press-release/2017/06/01/world-bank-group-statement-our-commitment-to-action-on-climate-change	1 June 2017
Business	ACCCE (The American Coalition for Clean Coal Electricity)	President and CEO, Paul Bailey	We support President Trump's decision to withdraw from the Paris agreement. The previous administration volunteered to meet one of the most stringent goals of any country in the world, while many other countries do far less to reduce their emissions. Meeting President Obama's goal would have led to more regulations, higher energy prices, and dependence on less reliable energy sources.	http://www.americaspower.org/press_release/accce-commends-president-trump-action-paris-climate-treaty/	1 June 2017
Business	AFL-CIO (American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations)	President Richard Trumka	Pulling out of the Paris climate agreement is a decision to abandon a cleaner future powered by good jobs. Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt has given dangerous advice around these issues. Following Pruitt's lead is a failure of American leadership. A deteriorating environment is not the only thing at stake here. When our leaders isolate America from the rest of the world, it hurts our ability to raise incomes for working families and achieve fairness in the global economy. The U.S. labor movement will continue to urge the United States to stay in the agreement so we can achieve the best outcomes for America's workers.	https://aflcio.org/press/releases/paris-climate-agreement-withdrawal-failure-american-leadership	1 June 2017

We remain committed to putting our scale and inventive culture to work in ways that are good for the environment and our customers. Business	American Coal Council	Council statement	The President made clear that the American people, the economy and jobs – including coal jobs – are his top priorities. "Otherwise, they risk being unable to sell their vehicles in global markets, including China, now the world's largest new-car market, and falling behind technologically."	http://www.cnbc.com/2017/06/01/autotraders-titans-say-theyre-still-committed-to-cutting-emissions.html	1 June 2017
Business	BDI (The Federation of German Industries)	Organisation	The decision of the US President to withdraw from the Paris Climate Agreement is a major setback for international politics. The isolationist course adopted by Donald Trump in climate policy stands in contradiction to the investment strategies of many companies in the US and worldwide that support the Paris Agreement. European policymakers have to react calmly and cool-headed. Europe and Germany in particular, have very ambitious climate targets. German industry will continue to support these targets in the future. But it would be wrong to step up our own reduction targets in reaction to the US decision. Protecting the climate is only possible with global cooperation. Unreliability and unpredictability are poison for the global solutions we need. The G20 states that continue to support the Paris Agreement must now cooperate even more closely and show that climate protection and economic productivity can grow hand in hand.	http://english.bdi.eu/#/article/news/major-setback-for-international-politics/	2 June 2017

Business	BP	SVP of U.S. Communications & External Affairs, Geoff Morrell	BP has long supported the Paris agreement, and we hope the Trump administration follows through with its intention to find a way for the U.S. to re-enter the accord – or another mechanism for addressing the global climate challenge – rather than to walk away from it entirely. BP continues to believe that it's possible to provide the world the energy it needs and achieve economic growth while also helping to transition the world to lower-carbon forms of energy.	http://www.bp.com/en_us/bp-us/media-room/press-releases/bp-statement-on-us-exit-from-the-paris-climate-agreement.html	1 June 2017
Business	CalPERS (California Public Employees' Retirement System)	CEO, Marcie Frost	CalPERS supports the Paris Agreement because it makes financial sense. It's notable that the decision to withdraw from the Paris Agreement comes just one day after ExxonMobil shareholders passed a resolution calling on the company to disclose climate change risks. There is growing support in the business and financial community for the goals of the Paris Agreement – to limit global warming to 2 degrees or less. As a global investor and as fiduciaries focused on the long-term sustainability of our investments, we will continue to support the Paris Agreement on climate change. The Paris Agreement enables us to manage material risk and build opportunity in our investment portfolio. Supporting its goals ultimately benefits our members and their long-term retirement security.	https://www.calpers.ca.gov/page/newsroom/calpers-news/2017/paris-agreement-decision	1 June 2017
Business	CBI (Confederation of British Industry)	CBI Head of Energy and Infrastructure	The Paris Agreement is a climate deal agreed by the world's leaders that puts us on a sustainable low-carbon path and which can provide the framework for business to invest with confidence. It's disappointing that President Trump has signalled his intention to withdraw the United States from the Agreement, but now is the time for governments to affirm their commitment to it by turning global ambition into national reality. By investing and innovating, British businesses will be at the heart of delivering a low-carbon economy, and will want to see domestic policies that demonstrate commitment to this goal. As other nations start to play a greater role and increase their ambition, the UK needs a level playing field for carbon costs, so that our energy intensive industries can compete effectively in a global, low-carbon marketplace.	http://www.cbi.org.uk/news/our-comments-on-us-climate-change-announcement/	2 June 2017

Business	Keidanren	Chairman SAKAKIBARA Sadayuki	The Paris Agreement is a historical international framework that promises that all countries, developed and developing countries alike, will take countermeasure to tackle global warming. It is regrettable that President Trump is now declaring the withdrawal from the agreement, which precludes the premise of the agreement. [...] Japan should continue to work with the United States while closely tying up with the international community. Both Japan and the United States have the world's top energy-saving and low-carbon technologies, and it is necessary to seek cooperation and collaboration towards reduction on a global scale, including the development and dissemination of innovative technologies. For the Keidanren, through steady promotion of the "Commitment to a Low Carbon Society", we will work to reduce global greenhouse gas emissions as well as attaining the mid-term target "Japan's 20% reduction by 26%" that Japan submitted to the United Nations.	http://www.keidanren.or.jp/speech/comment/2017/0602.html	2 June 2017
Business	MEDEF (French Business Confederation)	Pierre Gattaz, President	[Informal translation] This decision changes the situation and it is difficult to identify all the consequences. Business	Saint-Gobain	CEO, Laurent Guillot	[...] The countries that are in the forefront will take all the benefits of this global movement. It is for me very revealing to see the difference, in term of industrial and mercantile strategy, between China, India or Germany, contemplating the very ambitious idea of an internal combustion engine ban by 2030, and the one of the US, leaving the Paris climate agreement. There is a fair chance that the long term impact of these decisions will be exactly the opposite of President Trump's intent: the green technologies will be developed for the accelerating needs in China and in Germany giving a technical hedge for the companies of these countries, increasing their global competitiveness, for the benefit of their trade balance and their workers.	https://www.linkedin.com/pulse/fighting-climate-change-creating-business-jobs-though-laurent-guillot	2 June 2017

Business	Unilever	CEO, Paul Polman	We reached a point where the costs of inaction were higher than the costs of action, and everyone could see it. That's what makes this week's decision by the U.S. President so incomprehensible, and I remain hopeful that he will reconsider his position as more evidence of the impacts on the U.S. economy come to light. Think-tanks and NGO	Al Gore	Former US vice President	Removing the United States from the Paris Agreement is a reckless and indefensible action. It undermines America's standing in the world and threatens to damage humanity's ability to solve the climate crisis in time. But make no mistake: if President Trump won't lead, the American people will. Civic leaders, mayors, governors, CEOs, investors and the majority of the business community will take up this challenge. We are in the middle of a clean energy revolution that no single person or group can stop. President Trump's decision is profoundly in conflict with what the majority of Americans want from our president; but no matter what he does, we will ensure that our inevitable transition to a clean energy economy continues.	https://algore.com/news/statement-by-former-vice-president-al-gore-on-today-s-decision-by-the-trump-administration-to-withdraw-from-the-paris-agreement	1 June 2017
Think-tanks and NGO	Bloomberg Philanthropies	Mike Bloomberg	Today, Mike Bloomberg, the United Nations Secretary-General's Special Envoy for Cities and Climate Change, announced a commitment of up to $15 million to support the operations of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) Executive Secretariat, including its work to help countries implement their commitments under the 2015 Paris Agreement on climate change. Bloomberg will also work with other governments and philanthropies that may be interested in supporting the UNFCCC at this critical time. The pledge aims to fill a significant funding gap that comes as a result of President Donald Trump's announced withdrawal from the Paris agreement and proposed steep budget cuts for international programs, including on climate.	https://www.bloomberg.org/press/releases/bloomberg-philanthropies-commits-15-million-fill-budget-gap-left-trumps-revoking-us-support-un-climate-treaty/	1 June 2017
Think-tanks and NGO	CERES (sustainability nonprofit organization working with the most influential investors and companies)	Mindy Lubber	In the face of the Trump administration's failure to lead on climate change at the national level, the business community will not back down. Think-tanks and NGO	We Mean Business	Organisation	The We Mean Business coalition regrets today's announcement from the United States government indicating its intention to withdraw from the Paris Agreement and to renegotiate a new deal for the US. Think-tanks and NGO	WRI (World Resources Institute)	President & CEO, Andrew Steer	[...]Withdrawing from the Paris Agreement will leave the U.S. diplomatically adrift, at odds with nearly 200 countries. There are now 194 countries united in their determination on climate, while a group of three – Syria, Nicaragua, and the United States – stand apart. This decision is based on last century's economic thinking and will turn the U.S. back to last century's economy. It reflects a serious underestimation of American business ingenuity, and will be a drag on companies' ability to respond to the new economy of the 21st century. In reality, the U.S. has one of the most dynamic spirits of entrepreneurship in the world and should be at the head of the pack. In abandoning the Paris accord, the U.S. will lose out on new jobs and economic opportunities of the low-carbon future. Climate change presents a clear, urgent and undeniable threat. Vulnerable communities are already suffering from sea level rise, flooding, droughts, and heat waves. Climate refugees are increasingly a destabilizing force in many countries. These are the realities the U.S. must face. New coalitions of states, cities and businesses will help fill the void, but people will not forget that the Trump administration let them down at this critical moment. Meanwhile, China, India, the EU and many others have made it clear that they are eager and unwavering in their pursuit of a low-carbon future.[...]	http://www.wri.org/news/2017/06/statement-president-trump-decision-leave-paris-agreement-colossal-mistake	1 June 2017
Think-tanks and NGO	WWF (World Wildlife Fund)	Senior vice president of climate and energy, Lou Leonard	US leadership on climate change doesn't begin or end in Washington. Focusing on last week's disappointing decision by President Trump misses the bigger story – America is still in this fight. American companies, cities, states, colleges and universities are banding together to help meet US targets under the Paris Agreement. And it's not just Fortune 500 companies leading the way. From hundreds of small businesses on Main Street, to cities from Louisville to Pittsburgh, and schools from Arizona State to Ohio State, these American leaders are using their economic and political influence to shift the United States to clean energy and send a clear message to the world: the United States is committed to climate action and delivering on the Paris Agreement.	https://www.worldwildlife.org/press-releases/american-climate-leaders-declare-we-are-still-in	5 June 2017
